High Ridge Poultry Farm's Price List of Genuine True-to-Name Strawberry Plants for 1916

Description of the Early Ozark Strawberry

This is our favorite extra early variety. After testing all other extra early varieties, we find the Early Ozark to be the best extra early variety of them all. It is the first to ripen berries with us, and ripens its crop in a very short time and is out of the way before the midseason kinds come on. The plants grow extra large for an early variety and make a moderately good supply of runners. It is always healthy, vigorous and extra prolific. It will bear as many berries with us as the midseason varieties and that is saying a good deal in its favor. The fruit is large and does not get small toward's the close of the season, as other extra early varieties do. It does best on strong, rich soil, but will produce a good crop on an average soil. The color is rich, dark crimson, and the fruit is firm and solid, which makes a good shipper as well as a good home berry. The fruit is quite acid until thoroughly ripe, but when they get good and ripe they are of fine flavor. With us it is the best all around, extra early variety and should be grown by everybody for first early. We have an extra fine stock of these plants, and can furnish them at the following prices: 100 at 75c; 500 at $2.00; 1,000 at $3.00; 5,000 at $12 50.

Description of the Senator Dunlap Strawberry

The Dunlap is the best mid-season variety today. It is one of the most popular of all varieties and it certainly deserves to be. It commences to ripen about one week later than the Early Ozark, but continues to bear much longer. We have had them to last a month with good pickings every day. The plants are exceptionally vigorous and healthy growers, and will produce more berries under neglect and poor treatment than any other variety on the list. The berries average from medium to very large in size, depending on the kind of treatment they are given. The flavor of the berries is delicious, leaving nothing to be desired in that line. The berries are of dark rich red color, quite firm and solid, which makes it a good all purpose berry for either canning, eating fresh from the vines, or shipping, as it holds up well. This is one variety that the farmers and others who don't have the time to carry for the strawberry bed properly, should order. If you only set one variety, make this the one and I am sure you will not be disappointed. 100 at 50c; 500 at $1.50; 1,000 at $2.50; 5,000 at $10.00.

Description of the Americus Fall-Bearing Strawberry

This variety is, all things considered, the best variety for the average person to grow. Of all the fall-bearing kinds that we have tested, the Americus will produce about the same number of plants as the Early Ozark under the same conditions. It is not a large plant maker, and should be well cultivated to get a good run of plant. The plants are healthy and will stand hot and dry weather when common varieties will succumb. On light soil the berries are inclined to be small to medium in size, but on rich, strong soil they run large and fine. In fact the largest berries of any fall variety are picked from the Americus. When they are set on rich soil, the flavor is exceptionally fine and is superior to the most of the June varieties. We have a good supply of these plants and are making a price on them that anybody can afford to pay. 100 at $1.50; 500 at $4.00; 1,000 at $7 00. SOLD OUT.

Description of the Francis Fall-Bearing Strawberry

The Francis was produced in the same lot of seedlings as the Americus was, and the plants are very similar in growth, and the amateur could not tell one from the other, if both varieties were growing in the same field, but by having the two varieties under cultivation in your garden you will soon detect the difference. For my own use I prefer the Francis to all other kinds of the fall-bearing strawberries. It produces so much bloom and fruit so soon after being set that it is hard to get the young runners started, in fact it blooms and sets fruit on the runner plants before they take root in the ground. They are like all fall-bearers; they will succeed the best on rich ground, the richer the better. The berries are large and fine, some growing irregular, but glossy and attractive, and of the most beautiful color. This variety is a perfect success with us and should be tried out by everybody that wants berries from June to November. Our supply of plants of this variety is limited and those wanting plants of this variety should order them early. 100 at $1.50; 500 at $4.00; 1,000 at $7.00. SOLD OUT.
